1,000 Brave Rain

Queen Mother 'Very Tired' On Arrival

VANCOUVER (CP)—More than 1,000 persons braved driving rain Tuesday night to welcome Queen Mother Elizabeth here after her flight across Canada on her way to Australia and New Zealand.

* * *

The Queen Mother told Mayor Fred Hume she was "very tired" after the 18½-hour flight from London broken only by a brief stopover at Montreal. She said she was glad to be here for a 24-hour rest before the flight to Honolulu and Australia.

The BOAC airliner Seven Seas dropped through heavy black clouds into pouring rain as it landed at Vancouver's International Airport at 8.35 p.m.—almost 2½ hours ahead of original schedule.

STEPPED FORWARD

Lieutenant - Governor Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross stepped forward to meet the Queen Mother, then Mayor and Mrs. Hume were presented. Mrs. Hume's hat was blown off by a gust of wind as she made her curtsy.

Her Majesty told Mayor Hume she remembered well her last trip to Vancouver, 19 years ago, when she travelled across Canada with the late King George VI.

BROKE INTO CHEERS

The crowds, which stood silently in the rain as the Queen Mother stepped from the plane, broke into cheers as she was driven from the airport on her way to the Vancouver home of Lieutenant-Governor Ross, where she was to stay the night.

After a brief three minutes at the airport, Her Majesty drove off in the lieutenant-governor's limousine, the interior illuminated so that crowds waiting at points along the 10-mile route could see her.

She arrived at the Ross home, high above the ocean in the exclusive west-side Point Grey district, at 9.50 p.m.

CARRIES UMBRELLA

The Queen Mother carried an umbrella, but was without overshoes. She wore a brown fur coat with a maple leaf of diamonds pinned to the lapel and a double strand of pearls about her neck. She wore a royal blue velvet hat with a black feather.

The airport spectators were kept 50 feet from the plane but newspaper men and photographers were allowed within 20 feet.

If the weather is good, the Queen Mother will make a short tour of Vancouver today.

Royal Pilot

Native of Vancouver Island, Capt. John Woodman is captain on big BOAC DC-7C aircraft carrying Queen Mother on present Royal journey. Born at Cameron Lake and educated at Shawnigan Lake School, he was one of the youngest men (32) ever to receive British Master Pilot's Certificate in 1947.

Sky 'Eyes' On Alert

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Queen Mother's aircraft was under constant surveillance by RCAF "eyes" throughout its flight across Canada.

RCAF officials said the radar procedure was normal with planes carrying VIPs, but admitted that in this case two Canso and two Lancaster aircraft were standing by.

Premiers in Dark About Tax Changes

Plane-Weary but Still Smiling

Queen Mother was smiling, despite unpleasant weather last night, when she arrived at Vancouver airport to spend 24 hours in Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross' mainland home before continuing her round-the-world flight to Australia and New Zealand. 'Telegram Legislation' Charged in Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Donald Fleming said Tuesday night investigation showed that two provincial premiers did not receive Prime Minister Diefenbaker's telegrams Friday on tax changes and that this was the fault of an operator in the publicly-owned Canadian National Telegraph Company.

He told the Commons that telegrams to Premiers Douglas of Saskatchewan and Campbell of Manitoba did not reach their destinations. Follow-up substitute telegrams have been sent.

OPPOSITION CHARGES

Mr. Fleming's report of the investigation followed accusations from opposition members that the Progressive Conservative government was attempting to "legislate by telegram."

Stanley Knowles, deputy CCF leader, said he called Mr. Douglas by long-distance telephone Monday afternoon and was informed that even then Mr. Douglas had not received the telegram.

PROMISED BOOST

The wires informed the premiers that the central government had decided to boost the provinces' share of the federal personal income tax field to 13 per cent from 10 for the next fiscal year starting April 1.

Criticism was levelled at Mr. Fleming on the grounds that he had not given the provinces a chance to reply before initiating action on legislation in the Commons.

WHY DIFFERENCE

Mr. Fleming also sought to explain why his original figures issued Saturday on what the provinces would get in the way of individual increases as a result of the tax change had to be revised Monday.

But his statement brought a retort by James Sinclair (L—Coast-Capilano) that the explanation of the "extraordinary miscalculation" was the "weakest" he had ever heard given in the Commons.

WILL GET LESS

Under revised figures, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island would get less than anticipated, while the other eight provinces would get more.

Mr. Fleming said part of the reason for the changed figures was that the original ones did not include changes resulting from a clause which states that no province will get less than it would have received had the 1952-57 tax rental pact been continued.

OTHER YEARS

Mr. Fleming said his Saturday figures were a projection based on 1956-57 figures, while those issued Monday were based on tax yields estimated on the 1957-58 fiscal year.

Mr. Knowles said Mr. Fleming did not make clear who was the source of the mistaken figures. It was a "slipshod" way for the man responsible for actions of the federal treasury to act.

TALKS NEEDED

Mr. Knowles said the premiers should have been called to Ottawa to another federal-provincial conference for the proposal.

Jean Lesage, former resources minister, accused the prime minister of having "scuttled" the federal-provincial fiscal conference and of planning now to "scuttle" Parliament.

UNFAIR TO B.C.

Alex Macdonald (CCF, Vancouver Kingsway) maintained that the new tax change discriminates against B.C. in favor of Ontario and Quebec.

The over-all increase for 1958-59 would amount to some $62,203,000. Of this Ontario would get about $22,000,000. Quebec $18,000,000, B.C. less than $3,000,000.

EIGHT TIMES

With a population about four times that of B.C., Ontario was getting about eight times as much in increased federal money, he said. Quebec, with a population only three times that of B.C., was getting six times as much.

Gen. Gale Replacing 'Monty'

PARIS (Reuters) — Gen. Sir Richard Gale, 61-year-old British Paratrooper hero of the Second World War, has been called out of retirement and appointed deputy supreme allied commander in Europe in succession to Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, 70.

He will take over the post Sept. 21.

MLA Champions Teen-Agers

'One Bad-All Branded'

* * *

Actions of a small percentage of wrongdoers have caused most people to look on teen-agers' as an undisciplined mob, devoid of any sense of social responsibility, and totally incapable of doing anything sensibly and capably, Mrs. Buda Brown (SC, Vancouver-Point Grey) told the legislature yesterday.

She said the government owes to the rising generation of its youth all the assistance it can possibly bring to eliminate the stigma "thrust upon it by so few of its members."

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

It was sad, she continued, that much of the good of the group of teen-agers in the 13 to 18 bracket was taken entirely for granted.

"But let one teen-ager in the community commit a criminal act and all are branded and tainted at the same time," she said.

There were many types of offenders who needed special consideration but, she said, the juvenile who committed a crime against society must be punished as any other individual who committed a crime.

STEPS MUST BE TAKEN

"If our present accommodation is not adequate to handle the cases presenting themselves in court, then steps must be taken immediately to prepare such accommodation in which a program will be laid down which will be corrective and at the same time of a type that will eliminate repeater," Mrs. Brown stated.

She said it was "ridiculous" to place on probation those who had stolen an automobile not once, not twice, but a dozen times.

SAD ADMISSION

"To place those who have been accused and judged guilty of breaking and entering on probation and not in a proper institution is a sad admission of inefficiency," continued Mrs. Brown. "To hold offenders in detention without a program that maintains strict and severe discipline at all times is useless."

Fire Victims Aided By Ontario Crew

OTTAWA (CP)—The crew of the Canadian trainer cruiser Ontario recently contributed $500 from their pay to help 2,200 people left homeless in a fire in Panama City.

The Ontario was in Balboa at the western end of the Panama Canal when the disastrous fire struck Panama City.

The Ontario, on a training cruise for first-year cadets, now is at Acapulco, Mexico, and is scheduled to return to Esquimalt Feb. 10.

U.S. Must Have It, Says General

Death Will Pour From Moon Base

WASHINGTON (UP) — An air force general said yesterday that it is "inevitable", that the moon will become a military base that could be used to rain "massive destruction" on nations on earth.

Brig.-Gen. Homer A. Boushey, deputy director of air force research and development, said, in a speech here, that a moon base could be established in 10 years. If no international space control agreement can be obtained, he said, "then the United States must control the moon."

"The conquest of space is vital to U.S. interests," he said.

Boushey said the "most important" military advantage of a U.S. moon base would be that it would put the Russians on notice that they faced "sure and massive destruction" within 48 hours if they ever launched a missile attack upon the United States.

"Whoever gains the ultimate supremacy of space gains control — total control — over the earth," he said. He said the Russians have made control of space "the first aim of their national policy."

In other major defence developments:

The senate armed services committee approved a House-passed $549,670,000 emergency bill to authorize construction of an anti-missile warning system, another launching base for U.S. missiles and more dispersed bases for the Strategic Air Command.

Biggest Haul Ever

MONTREAL (BUP) — Loot in a weekend burglary was officially set at $1,800,000 worth of bearer bonds yesterday. It was the largest known haul of its kind in North American history.

Henri Ouimet, general manager of the Societe Nationale de Fiducie, a trust company, said the bonds were owned by the Caisse Nationale D'Economie, an insurance company subsidiary of the trust company which used the same premises and vault.

Detectives said the safecrackers, described as experts, probably hid in the downtown financial district building Friday night and attacked the vaults shortly after offices closed for the weekend.

State Sport Pools Urged for Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Progressive Conservative member of Parliament Frank McGee said Tuesday that Canada should have government - controlled sport pools.

Mr. McGee, who has had "quite an amount of correspondence and phone calls" complaining about pools being illegal in Canada, said he will approach the justice department to see if the law can be changed.

"Members of all parties in the House privately would be willing to go along with this," said the member for Toronto York-Scarborough.

"The pools could be run on a seasonal basis," the 31-year-old member theorized during an interview in his Commons office.

"There could be hockey pools in winter and football pools in fall."

"Gambling on a large scale has been justifiably condemned because it has worked a hardship on the wage earners," said Mr. McGee, descendant of Thomas D'Arcy McGee, a Father of Confederation.

But "a great many people like to participate in inexpensive office pools, football pools and church raffles.

Mr. McGee said even churches are raising money for construction and other purposes "from raffles of one kind or another."

There was "a general acceptance by the public" of this kind of pool.

Mr. McGee said Canadians spend "considerable amounts" on overseas pools and maintained the money "could be put to better use here."

Oxygen Dropped To Ill Explorer

McMURDO SOUND, Antarctica (UP) — Two U.S. Navy planes, flying a hazardous emergency mission, dropped cylinders of oxygen early today for a British Antarctic explorer overcome by carbon monoxide poisoning some 150 miles from the South Pole.

The P2V Neptunes were dispatched from this U.S. Antarctic base in answer to a radio message from Dr. Vivian Fuchs, head of the British overland expedition crossing the Antarctic continent, that a member of his party, 33-year-old seismologist Geoffrey Pratt, had collapsed twice with carbon monoxide poisoning and the expedition's oxygen supply had run out.

One of the U.S. aircraft had originally hoped to make a landing at the Fuchs expedition site, at an elevation of 10,000 feet, in 20-degree below zero weather but limited visibility made a landing too hazardous.

Pearkes Says:

'Can't Stop Every Red Plane'

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Pearkes said Tuesday any Russian air attack on North America would wreak "dreadful carnage" in Canada and the United States.

"We can't stop every bomber and missile," he said in an off-the-cuff speech to the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs Association.

Russia could win a world war only by winning it in North America, the minister said. Tremendous devastation would not mean that the war was lost. Canada would have to maintain its morale, however, in a battle for survival.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Jobless Hungarians have pooled their resources to take over an eight-room house at 1250 Pandora, which they will use as a meeting place and workshop.

Among the 120 Hungarians who are permanently unemployed in Victoria, and the 80-odd who can get only a few days' casual work, are technicians, craftsmen and skilled workmen of more than 40 trades.

I have not personally checked their claims, but they say that they are able to do all kinds of work from carpentry and gardening to glass-embossing, dressmaking, radio repairing and baby-sitting.

My attempts to get a clear account of their plans have been much hampered by language difficulties. Their chief spokesman, Albert Bekes, is making some progress with English. The fault [illegible] matter how hard he tries to communicate. I can only catch about one word in 10.

Several interpreters have tried to help. But they have all been German-speaking people. By the time the message has filtered through German into English, it has lost much of its original flavor.

On the basis of the information gathered by this circuitous route, I have much admiration for the spirit of these refugees who are trying to find their feet in Canada and solve their problems in a co-operative way.

I hope they don't meet too many rebuffs, or run foul of too many hampering restrictions.

Blacksmiths, Tree-Pruners

Mr. Bekes says they can repair lawnmowers and other agricultural machinery, small and large; cars, radios, electrical appliances; do blacksmith work; plumbing, roofing; cement work; tree-pruning, dressmaking, hairdressing.

Among them are architectural draftsmen, mechanical and electrical engineers.

They are willing to paint, lay carpets, clean basements, keep house; deliver packages and materials in their co-operatively-owned truck.

In fact, the Hungarian centre on Pandora promises to be a kind of human department store, with a multitude of skills housed under one roof.

At 8 p.m. Feb. 1 they are having a Hungarian crafts exhibition. I hope they will have some Hungarian-English interpreters on hand there.

The telephone number is 4-7642 (until 12 noon each day, only); and 5-7629.

In the current Atlantic Monthly, Ida Bobula (a former teacher in a Hungarian university) has this to say about the 33,000 Hungarians who were admitted to Canada:

"Nearly half of the Hungarian refugees need competent further help and guidance before we can call them happily integrated. But that guidance should be intelligent.

"They are bruised, exhausted after the long, cruel struggle with Communism; They are like the survivors of a shipwreck two feet from the shore. Their first necessity is care and then a job; not any job but the right place for the right man."

In any group as large as this, there are bound to be some bad apples. "But more numerous and important, are the young, the brave, the gifted, the determined, who could at the right moment make the right decision in order to survive. The spirit they bring is one of practical idealism — a bonus to any nation."

Ida Bobula suggests a social centre, placement and counselling office for Hungarians in every large city. Toronto has one. The Victoria Hungarian centre may not serve all these purposes, but it will help.

This little-known Deodar cedar cone which takes three years to develop—and only after trees are 30 to 40 years old—is admired by Joan Young, 1252 Gladstone. Many home gardeners have grown the trees here for years without ever seeing their cones. —(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Immigrant Cedar Cones Stir Gardeners' Curiosity

Immigrants from Korea, North Africa, Libya and Afghanistan on display in the Provincial Museum are catching attention of keen Victoria gardeners.

They are specimens of the branches and cones of the Korean pine, the Atlas cedar, cedar of Lebanon and the Deodar cedar.

And the comment is mainly over the cones.

Provincial botanist Dr. Adam Szczawinski, who gathered the specimens from the Saanichton experimental farm, said yesterday many gardeners in the area grew the trees as ornamentals, but had never seen the cones—they only come when the trees are 30 to 40 years old.

And then the cones take three years to develop from tiny, dark buds to maturity.

Before Ripple Blast

Dam Pictures Taken—In Case

All installations and equipment on the B.C. Power Commission's John Hart development at Campbell River will probably be photographed in detail before the Ripple Rock blast in April, R. C. McMordie, chief engineer for the power commission told The Daily Colonist last night.

He said the commission did not anticipate any damage from the blast—to be the world's biggest underwater explosion—but the pictures would be taken as a precaution in the event of insurance claims.

After the explosion all the equipment would be re-photographed so that comparisons could be made.

Col. C. R. North, project manager of the Ripple Rock job, told the Colonist that the same procedure would likely be followed at other plants and installations in the area such as at the Duncan Bay pulp and paper mill.

B.C. Power Commission officials expect that the only effect the blast might have on its Campbell River installations would be to trip sensitive relay switches and these can be easily and quickly reset by hand.

Meanwhile the commission has run into more trouble at its Upper Campbell dam site. Faults have been discovered in the bottom of the dam spillway, where layers of limestone have been breaking off in huge chunks under pressure from rushing water.

Engineers expect that it will be necessary to concrete the spillway for a maximum of 150 feet. It is 80 feet wide.

The trouble was located when it was necessary to spill water because the Upper Campbell-Buttle Lake reservoir lake is now up to 18 feet, one foot below the maximum operating level.

However, Power Commission officials point out there is no danger of flooding. The commission is allowed to raise the level by 12 more feet in the event of flood conditions.

Heavy rains and the fact the pulp mills—big users of commission power — are not in operation, are reasons given for the big water storage.

Engineers now working on the relining of the dam tunnel with a heavier steel than the conduit piping which was washed out in June. Some $200,000 has been allotted, but more money may be needed to complete the job.

Also in progress is a $90,000 job of re-locating a transmission line which was partially knocked down during a Christmas gale.

Nothing But Best On New Freighter

About 100 Sunday afternoon sunshine-lovers were attracted to Ogden Point docks by the entrance of one of the most impressive cargo-passenger freighters to stop here.

She was the year-old 12,500-gross-ton Swedish vessel Kirribilli, owned by Trans Atlantic Steamship Co. of New Zealand. She arrived here from San Francisco to load lumber here, at Chemainus and at Vancouver for Australia.

The 511-foot-long vessel has accommodation (none vacant) for 12 passengers, which can boast of roomy, well-appointed comfort equal to the best passenger liners.

A popular feature to longshoremen here is her lumber-loading apparatus — electric cranes rather than winches.

Middle distillates, chiefly for home heating, now account for almost one-third of Canadian oil requirements.

Suspended Sentence, Bond For Hesitant Gem-Finder

A one-year suspended sentence was handed down yesterday to Mrs. Elizabeth Speed, 2621 Doncaster, who had been convicted of stealing a $3,000 bracelet last Sept. 30.

"You were employed as a waitress," said Magistrate Henry C. Hall. "That is a position of trust, and no organization, large or small, can carry on without that trust being observed.

"I am taking into consideration certain other factors. You are a young woman, always previously of good character and with no offence charged against you.

"I am considering very carefully, too, the fact that you have three young children. They would undobtedly suffer if you were incarcerated for any period.

"This offence was a very serious matter, but I am giving you a suspended sentence. You will be placed under bond of $1,000 to be of good behavior for one year, and to report to the probation officer as required."

The emerald-and-diamond bracelet in this case was the property of Mrs. Walter C. Koerner of Vancouver, who lost it at a reception at the Empress Hotel. Accused was employed as a waitress at that reception.

She found the bracelet, but delayed returning it in spit of the fact that the staff knew a valuable bracelet was missing.

Three youths charged with breaking and entering with intent to steal at the Economy Steam Laundry Ltd., 607 John, were committed for trial in higher court yesterday.

Harry Douglas Hoskin, 19, Mount Newton Crossroad; Ronald Leslie McMeeken, 18, 1906 Birch, and Norman Karl McKenzie, 20, of 1035 Empress, were committed by Magistrate Henry C. Hall following preliminary hearing Monday. All were remanded to yesterday by the magistrate.

Joseph S. Filson, 2898 Mt. Baker Road, won dismissal by Magistrate Hall on a charge of impaired driving.

"It is true," said the magistrate, "that your confused manner on the street on Jan. 5 justified the officers in their action against you.

"Against that, however, there is the testimony of your witness, a respectable man, a non-commissioned officer in Her Majesty's forces.

"I cannot ignore that testimony, when you are entitled to the benefit of any doubt. I find you not guilty."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce plans a full-scale campaign in April to increase membership, Arnold Webb, managing secretary, said last night.

The chamber now has 700 members. Potential new members will be drawn from 4,500 businesses in Greater Victoria.

"The chamber needs more brains, talents and money to carry out a more effective program," Mr. Webb said.

Heading the campaign will be a membership committee consisting of William Yardley, Eric Mollett, and Lee Briggs.

Turk Will Lead Military Staff For Baghdad Pact

ANKARA, Turkey (UP)—The Baghdad pact ministers and U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles yesterday approved a permanent military planning staff and named a Turk to head it.

The staff will map co-ordination of the fight against Communism in the Middle East but will not act as a joint military command on the NATO style.

Turkish Lt.-Gen. Ekrem Akalin was named to head the staff for 1958. U.S. Air Force Maj.-Gen. Daniel S. Campbell was appointed his deputy.

Dulles told the ministers' meeting there should be greater exchanges of information among the regional pacts such as Baghdad (METO), SEATO and NATO.

He also warned the pact members that they "dare not give so absolute a priority to military requirements that economic help collapses."

The plan was worked up by the pact's military committee, of which the United States is a member. The United States is not a full-fledged member of the pact so Dulles attended in the foreign ministers' meeting as an observer. The pact members are Britain, Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Pakistan.

The military plan was kept secret although it was known to include proposals for some sort of meshing of the individual forces of the pact nations against the Soviet threat in the north.

Planning has gone forward on the basis that an attack on one pact member would be an attack on all, although it was understood this was not specifically written into the plan.

Mill Rate Protests In Early

Most of the protest letters received at Saanich municipal hall are appealing against a mill rate which has not yet been set, Municipal Assessor W. Jack Lindsay said yesterday.

Some 245 protest letters have been received by the council — three times as many as normal, he said, but some 15,000 assessments were increased this year — against 2,000 in a normal year.

MAIN WORRY

"There are some writers, of course, who feel the assessment of their properties is too high," Mr. Lindsay said, "but the main worry is over an increased mill rate."

Normally only assessments changed in the municipality are those necessary through subdivision or new construction, but this year wholesale reassessments were made necessary through the provincial Equalization of Assessment Act.

Six Deaths Laid to Couple

'Crazy Killers' Hunted

BENNET, Neb. (AP)—A bizarre series of killings mounted to six yesterday while authorities desperately searched southeast Nebraska for a teen-aged couple suspected of the slayings.

Lancaster County attorney Elmer Scheele said he will file first-degree murder charges against the pair.

Frightened farm families turned on yard lights at dusk and watched with loaded guns lest they be caught off guard by a 9-year-old youth officers branded a "crazy-killer."

Police with sawed-off shotguns and submachine-guns patrolled the countryside between Lincoln and Bennet, 20 miles to the northeast, believing the boy and girl they want still are in the area.

They sought Charles Starkweather, 19, and Carol Fugate, 15, of Lincoln.

Three members of Carol's family were found slain Monday in their Lincoln home after Carol turned relatives away from the house saying all the occupants were sick.

Discovery of August Meyer, 70, the fourth victim, spurred the search. Later, in a storm cellar searchers found Carol King, 16, and Robert Jensen, 17, shot to death with a small calibre rifle.

The other three victims were Marion Bartlett, 57, his wife, 37, and the Bartletts' two-year-old daughter, Betty Jean.

Bartlett's body was in a chicken coop, Mrs. Bartlett was found in an outhouse, and the baby's body had been stuffed into a cardboard box in a pile of cartons in the outhouse.

Who'll Tell Boy Dog Pal Dead?

GARDNER, Kan. (AP) — A four-year-old boy, blind since birth, was sobbing and calling for his dog, Shadow.

How could you tell the boy that his pal was dead?

Lt. Cmdr. Wesley R. Shaw was seeking the answer.

"You don't know how to tell him," Shaw said. "He asks for the dog about 45 times a day."

About the time his son, Jeffrey, was born, Shaw got a Weimaraner puppy. Jeffrey and Shadow grew up together.

Shaw brought his family here two weeks ago from Seattle.

Shadow was kept tied in the back yard, but several days ago a pack of dogs raced past and he broke loose and followed.

City officials caught the dogs and destroyed them. Shaw found Shadow's body at the city dump, still with collar, tag and nameplate.

Bid in for New Ship

Yarrows End Job, Will Lay Off 200

Completion of all present government contracts is forcing Yarrows Ltd. shipyard to lay off 200 men, it was announced yesterday by John Wallace, general manager.

Work on the last government job, modernizing the frigate HMCS New Waterford, has been completed and the vessel is to be commissioned by the RCN this Friday.

The layoffs will take place today, Thursday and Friday. One hundred and forty workers will remain.

Mr. Wallace said his firm had placed a bid for construction of a department of transport ship soon to be built on the West Coast.

A $4,000,000 giant icebreaker, for which the company was awarded the contract last April, is having its hull built in Vancouver. It is not due at Yarrows for outfitting for a year.

Meanwhile, Mr. Wallace said, the company is hoping for tanker overhaul and repair jobs, but none are confirmed at the present time.

More Money from Ottawa

B.C. to Keep Asking

The provincial government will continue to demand more money from Ottawa as long as it is in office, Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the legislature yesterday.

He hit out at opposition criticism and defended government policy in a lengthy speech during the Throne Speech debate.

Noting that Opposition Leader Robert Strachan had accused the government of "cheese-paring," "penny-pinching," and of having a policy of just asking Ottawa for more, Mr. Bonner said:

"We have been going down to Ottawa on many occasions and we shall continue to go there until we can get some satisfactory fiscal arrangements. We intend to press for better fiscal arrangements. Of course this government asks for more and it will continue to ask for more as long as it has the confidence of the electorate."

In the last federal-provincial conference, he continued, the B.C. government had gone to Ottawa with concrete suggestions aimed at helping the present unemployment situation. He said the government felt the conference should have been continued until a solution to unemployment was found.

"Since this government took office a tremendous amount of things have been done, but cheese-paring is not one of them," said Mr. Bonner.

Turning to other matters Mr. Bonner disclosed that the Nelson jail and the women's jail at Prince George will be closed soon as part of the reorganization of the provincial jail service.

He later announced that the New Haven Borstal home would also be closed, but that its functions would be continued at Haney.

B.C.'s Increase: 'Not a Nickel'

Premier Bennett said yesterday that B.C. won't get "a nickel" more in federal government payments as a result of the new tax-sharing arrangement announced in Ottawa during the weekend.

He said reports from Ottawa that B.C. will get an additional $2,800,000 a year under the new arrangement were not accurate.

Later in the day, Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the legislature the same thing and hit out at the error made by the federal government. He said the amount promised B.C. had been more than $5,000,000 when the original announcement had been made, but this had been cut down to $2,800,000 after federal officials had found they were in error.

"When the second error is discovered this province will not receive a nickel more," he said.

The Queen Mother

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN MOTHER is making Commonwealth history this week at the beginning of what will be an air trip around the world. A safe mid-winter crossing of the Atlantic, a sudden snowstorm in Montreal and the mild, spring-like weather on the Pacific Coast as the royal plane touched down at Vancouver after dark yesterday began the journey. At her own command, Queen Elizabeth briefly was the guest of Governor-General Massey in the east, and now of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Ross at their beautiful home in Vancouver.

Although the Queen Mother's stay in this province will be less than 30 hours in duration, it should afford a welcome break-journey on a strenuous undertaking. The visit has vividly recalled for British Columbians the great occasion in 1939 when the late King George VI and her Majesty stayed in Victoria in their state visit to Canada. The wealth of esteem and warm affection which made that visit memorable is still fresh in the minds of all. On the present occasion, the Queen Mother is pioneering in a new role, that of goodwill ambassador to the Commonwealth in the magic-carpet mode of travel today.

Her Majesty's decision to fly to Australia and New Zealand via Canada sets an example that will surely be followed. It emphasizes the geographical and other close relationships of Canada to the Motherland and to the Commonwealth at large. Here in a single trip the Queen Mother will touch down in three of the Commonwealth countries on the outbound journey alone. It may be a challenging experience for Her Majesty, as it would be for anyone, to be whisked at such speed over oceans and continents in what before it ends will be a complete circuit of the globe. In a symbolical sense, however, the swiftly-changing scene will be only that, while in each Commonwealth land she visits on this occasion the Queen Mother will stir the same memories, evoke the same genuine response, and remain in her own person a reminder of the intangibles which link not merely nations but hearts together.

Demonstration of Good Faith

PROVINCIAL HEALTH MINISTER MARTIN is looking a gift horse in the mouth when he describes the increased federal grants for hospital construction—doubled in the more important instances — as "most inadequate." A $2,000 grant per bed where $1,000 was contributed by the Dominion before surely is something for which the province should be grateful, not ungracious, especially towards a government which is not obligated to assist at all. Hospitals are a local and provincial responsibility.

The federal government's decision to double or substantially increase the grants originally established by the former administration was prompted by a desire to stimulate new hospital building in a period of somewhat reduced employment in the construction industry. Mr. Martin said it won't do so; and he may be right, so far as British Columbia is concerned. But action was taken to help all the provinces, many of which are in a less fortunate position than B.C. Furthermore, and regardless of what Mr. Martin says, the availability of extra money from Ottawa simplifies to some extent at least the problem of financing new construction and thus may permit hospital authorities to proceed with building plans earlier than might have been possible otherwise.

Hospitals are not built or enlarged simply because there happens to be enough money at hand to build them. They are built because they have to be built to accommodate the sick and injured people of the community. If from the Dominion $2,000 is to be made available where $1,000 was offered before, that surely is a good thing and does not deserve Health Minister Martin's scornful dismissal.

Taken in conjunction with the concurrent announcement of an increase from 10 to 13 per cent in the Province's share of income tax revenue, this new policy on hospital costs is a demonstration of good faith on the part of the Conservative government, and of an earnest desire to place Dominion-provincial relations on a firmer and more realistic foundation. It offers bright encouragement as to the outcome of the full-scale Dominion-provincial conference yet to come. It is a matter for applause, not rebuke, that Prime Minister Diefenbaker's government has acted to make extra assistance available immediately, without waiting as it very well could have done for a conference to explore the need.

The Hoxsey Report

BY most people the report of the UBC investigating committee into the Hoxsey cancer clinic of Dallas, Texas, will be accepted as affirmative. The composition of the committee, authorized by the government after claims and counter-claims on the subject, was authentic; its examination on the spot seems to have been thorough; and its conclusions cannot be set aside.

The committee's verdict is that the methods and medications used by the Hoxsey clinic are of no value in the treatment of internal cancer. Its judgment is that diagnosis is inadequate, that the treatment does not affect the progress of the disease, that there is no follow-up evaluation of results, and that no significant research has been done. It finds that the Hoxsey clinic arouses false hopes in patients and involves a useless expenditure of money on their part.

These are clear-cut findings incapable of misinterpretation. One can understand the plight of suffering people who naturally will clutch at any straw to be cured. Because of the Hoxsey claims an increasing number of patients from British Columbia have been attracted to this clinic in recent years, and that is not strange. It is to the clinic's credit that the investigating committee was given every opportunity to examine cases and records, but the adverse report cannot reasonably be gainsaid.

One paragraph of the committee's report is extremely revealing. It tells of witnessing the medicative treatment of an external cancer and of the application of a paste "with absolutely no regard for asepsis or antisepsis." There was no washing of hands or wearing of gloves. Instruments were used from an open shelf and gauge for the wound taken from an open roll. Apparently sterilization is ignored at the Hoxsey clinic.

Antiseptic precautions are so elemental in the practice of medicine it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that their absence is indicative of the philosophy which governs the operation of this clinic.

Chess Game with Billions

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

FOREIGN aid has become a sort of chess game within the cold war.

The game has no rules. Some observers say victory could mean nothing less than victory in the cold war itself—without blood, shooting or the bomb.

The greatest prize is the under-developed countries of the world, and Russia has moved into the field with gusto. The U.S. state department estimates that the Soviet Union has extended more than $1,000,000,000 worth of credit to under-developed nations in the last three years.

* * *

The U.S. administration has placed emphasis on the Russian figure because it currently is pressing Congress for an increase in its own foreign aid. President Eisenhower has asked for $3,900,000,000 for the new fiscal year, including $2,600,000,000 for military aid.

Apart from the under-developed, uncommitted countries, some western leaders are fascinated by the thought of using such aid to woo the populations of satellite countries away from their Communist masters.

* * *

Another group contends that Western countries delude themselves by extending aid to Communist countries like Yugoslavia and Poland, which have kicked over the Moscow traces at times.

Western World, a non-profit international magazine whose purpose is the strengthening of NATO, discusses this topic in its monthly debate, posing the question:

"Is it our interest to help communism?"

* * *

Dr. Guerogi Dimitrove, long a leader of the Bulgarian underground and now president of the Bulgarian national committee for liberation, describes national communism as a "mirage."

As an example, he described the reaction of "some so-called experts" after Yugoslav President Tito's break with Moscow.

"They rushed economic, military and, in effect, political aid, to the Yugoslav Communist dictatorship and thus saved it from imminent downfall," says Dimitrove.

"And Tito was quick to realize the advantage of his new status. In complete harmony with Soviet bluffs and manoeuvres, he began staging dramatic 'conflicts' with Moscow 'because of ideological differences.' He manoeuvred in this way whenever he needed new or increased aid from the free world . . . and whenever the West appeared suspicious about his game."

IN a social chat with a man of the cloth the other day the conversation turned on church-going and the thesis that a person might lead a Christian life and yet never go near a church.

Of course he might, conceded the clergyman, although there was a but. He would still not be separated from the church, for no one can be completely on his own.

What he meant was that if there had been no church the person concerned couldn't lead a Christian life; he'd then know nothing about Christianity.

Human existence may be tenuous but it's linked by a continuous thread just the same.

Turning the point in other directions the operative remark is "no one can be absolutely individual."

No more he can. We are all part of the human cosmos, past and present.

* * *

Occasionally some persons think otherwise. Every age in fact likes to plume itself that it's distinctive, fresh and new and untrammelled. Thus it is by lifting bars from old melodies some composers imagine they are coining new songs.

There is probably no new tune in all the world.

Some people even argue that adults shouldn't teach children adult ideas of things. What else they can possibly teach them is a mystery, and the only way to carry out such a mandate would be to teach children nothing, period. The latter would certainly grow up purely individual, that is true; with empty heads.

A caller at the office yesterday remarked that when he tells his grandsons anything about his first war experiences they shrug these off with a scoff as being "bow and arrow stuff." Relatively speaking I suppose that is also true, although an arrow finding its mark can be as utterly deadly as an inter-continental ballistic missile.

I doubt that spacemen would appreciate that thought, however.

Actually a highly-priced, highly-touted ICBM of 1958 is a close relative of the cheap, old-fashioned arrow sped from a bow by Robin Hood. The lethal intent is the same, and so is the basic premise of operation.

There can be, as you see, no separation from the past. Some novelists think there can be and so they come out with two-ton erotic novels they fancy are as new as nuclear fission, forgetting, if they ever knew, that Scheherazade and Boccaccio and a host of others anticipated them long ago.

* * *

Even rock 'n' roll isn't individual any more, assuming it ever was. Probably some African tribe, itself emancipated to belief that witch doctors are has-beens, would sniff at this North American craze as old stuff. In fact a study of Fraser's "Golden Bough" is enough to humble any modern who thinks he is the very latest cat's whisker.

You would see in the paper that a Soviet magazine has been lecturing the rock 'n' roll enthusiasts of the Russian stage, indicating that this aberration has beaten the ICBM to the punch. It is no longer individual to this continent.

Nothing of course can be contained, unless its innovator hides his secret and that is against the grain of nature. In any case he owes his invention to knowledge of what went on before him, even if he merely demonstrates this by contrast.

Why, not so long ago I heard an architect declare that when the caveman draped a blanket over the mouth of his cave to keep out the cold this was the first functional design of all.

You see, then, how for good or ill we are all linked to the past, including the Christian who never goes to church.

Big Drum Small Stick . . .

Britain's Scientific Leadership

By STANLEY GODFREY

II

ONE of Canada's largest aluminum plants recently ordered from a United Kingdom firm a bank of transformers for the powerhouse of a huge hydro-electric project. The transformers had to be as small as possible to fit into the spaces hewn from a cliffside. And they had to be made with aluminum windings, the first time such a job had ever been attempted.

Weeks before the final contract date, the finished transformers, their aluminum cases covered with a protective coat of dull grey paint, were on their way across the Atlantic—and they were only half the size that the engineers had allowed for in the housings.

The story behind the transformers is the story of Britain's great electrical industries which have supplied machinery and technicians for power stations throughout the world for over half a century and who still lead the world in volume of exports, technical achievement, after-sales service and reliability.

When the Canadian contract arrived in the north of England factory which was to build the transformers, special teams of mathematicians set to work with electronic computers to study the problems involved in aluminum construction. Other teams designed special high pressure cooling systems to match the methods. Before the machines had even begun to operate in Canada repeat orders arrived at the factory concerned.

* * *

The story is not unique. In the field of heavy electrical equipment, as in most other branches of heavy industry, British engineers are racing ahead in new designs and techniques to meet the challenge of the electronic and the atomic age. Among their achievements of the last year the new radiotelescope installed at Jodrell Bank as part of Britain's contribution to the International Geophysical Year ranks high. The lessons learned in the construction of its delicately balanced machinery have been turned to good account in the production of television receivers, cameras and optical instruments that Britain sends to all parts of the world.

Then there is the splendid work of the cable-laying ship Monarch, the largest in the world, which sank the telegraph cables between San Francisco and Honolulu at over 3,000 fathoms—some 3½ miles—the deepest water in which cables have ever been laid. The laying of this link followed years of joint research by British radio and cable companies to develop a cable sufficiently large to carry the heavy traffic it would need to pay for its upkeep and strong enough to withstand the terrific pressures and corrosions of immersion in the ocean and attack by undersea life.

Yet another example of British research achievement, although less spectacular, is the fire crash truck developed by a private firm which has now been ordered as standard equipment for many of the military and civil airports in Canada. In the air itself the British turboprop airliners roam the world's skies ushering in a new era in passenger comfort and low operating costs.

* * *

In the world battle for trade markets British ingenuity and technical skill are paying rich dividends. Radio-isotopes for medical and industrial use, produced in the atom town of Harwell, are flown around the world in the wing-tip compartments of British airliners. The first export order for a nuclear power station was placed by Italy with a British consortium in November, 1957. And Britain leads the world in the export of electronic components and apparatus — the vital nerve centres for the delicate control mechanisms in an age of automation.

From New Year's Day in Britain the cost of middle-distance telephone calls was drastically reduced as electronic equipment went into operation in the major cities to replace the manual and electrically-operated exchanges. It is now possible to telephone 50 miles across London for as little as three cents, a quarter of the previous fee. Export enquiries for similar telephone exchanges figure high on the nation's electronic order books.

In civil engineering new haulage equipment, dumpers, bulldozers and improved forms of rapid shutter building which are helping to change the face of the nation are winning major orders from overseas — last year they totalled some $270,000,000.

Projects now being carried out overseas include the world's largest industrial estate scheme, near Vancouver, B.C., and the world's most up-to-date teaching hospital at Ibadan in Nigeria. In every one of these projects British skill and British reliability were second to none.

But as members of the recent Canadian trade mission to Britain emphasized over and over again, there is one thing that Britain still has to learn—and it doesn't require a single scientist or mathematician. That is the need to speak up for herself. The British traditionally have a flair for understatement. They have a large drum but bang it with a very small stick.

Sir Robert MacLean, president of the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, summed it up this way at the dinner he gave for local industrialists and members of the Canadian trade mission: "He who whispers down a well about the goods he has to sell will never make as many dollars as he who climbs a tree and hollers."

He has a point.

Too Much at One Bite

(From The Calgary Albertan)

IN some respects we believe that the royal commission on education appointed by the B.C. government the other day may reach to the heart of the matter under study more quickly and with more efficiency than the similar body appointed recently in Alberta.

The reason for that belief has nothing to do with the personnel of the commissions—in both cases the commissioners have been well chosen—but rests on the frames of reference given to the two bodies.

There is something to be said for the instructions given to the Alberta group, that it is to inquire into all aspects of education in the province from curriculum to finances. But the very generality of the inquiry may prove to be its undoing.

In B.C. the commission has been set the task of inquiring mainly into the educational system itself — to study the problem at the academic level and to see where standards and methods might be better.

The only two points where the B.C. group might touch on non-academic matters are the question of teacher supply and utilization and construction of school facilities. But it has been made clear that the emphasis is to be placed on such questions, as: Can discipline in schools be improved? Is it feasible to extend the present school terms and to shorten the high school program in terms of years? Is the educational system meeting the needs of students in a world fast moving more towards the sciences?

What the B.C. government has done, then, is to set up an inquiry which can be completed fairly rapidly and the results of which can be used immediately to remedy any deficiencies in the system.

The Alberta inquiry, on the other hand, may have the fault of resulting in a too long delay in remedying present faults in education in this province as a result of too much work on one group. Perhaps it would have been better had the Alberta inquiry proceeded by shorter stages rather than all at once.

Anything to Confuse

(From The Toronto Globe and Mail)

A PUZZLING anomaly of motor traffic is its persistent and mandatory mix-up of lights. At crossings green means proceed, amber means caution, red means stop. But in the tail lights of cars, red means both stop and go—and all in the same set of lamps.

As a safer alternative, a correspondent has suggested either green or amber tail lights, against which the red of brake lights would show up unmistakably. Another suggests amber, and at about eye level.

Either proposal sounds like an improvement on the present. The unending crop of rear-end collisions testifies that the dual and conflicting role of red is ineffective. Perhaps it even promotes rather than warns of danger—and the more so since the advent of power brakes.

The Packsack

of GREGORY CLARK

IT was nearly 2 o'clock before I got into the cafeteria for lunch, having been held up by a long-winded friend whom I didn't want to have lunch with on account of his long-windedness. I told him I had already had lunch. So, seeing him off safely in the opposite direction, I proceeded to my favorite cafeteria. It was nearly empty. As I walked along the counter, I noted that most of the food looked a little tired. But there was a fine new pan of freshly-cooked spaghetti with meat balls. So I indicated that.

"Hold on, hold on!" I protested, as the counter man heaped up the plate. He was giving me about a gallon of it.

He glanced at me with surprise, and reduced the load.

The waitress who was standing by to carry my tray smiled and winked at me. When we reached a table, she remarked:

"He mistook you for a latecomer."

"I am a latecomer," I admitted.

"No," she whispered, glancing about at the customers scattered around. "But there is a kind of latecomer who is a regular. He or she comes late because, the rush being over, they get bigger helpings of what is left."

The countermen grow generous when they see certain pans of food that are bound to be left over. And the big appetiters have found this out.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

A preacher met one of his flock. "You were not at church last Sunday," said the parson.

"Too wet," was the reply.

"But it's always dry inside," protested the minister.

"That's another reason I wasn't there."

Fluoridated 'Pop'

Eloise D. Lee's suggestion, Jan. 24, that fluoridation of city water can be likened to putting vitamin D in food will most likely be taken care of by more able pens than mine, but I see no similarity between them, as those who don't want vitamin D leave it on the shelf. Do we get the same choice when the water is dosed?

Why don't the fluoridationists get some pop manufacturing company to put fluoride in the pop? If it is such a good thing it would increase the sale forthwith and that way the people would have it on the shelf, and 100 per cent of the people would be satisfied, which is a hard figure to beat either by democratic or any other standard.

Nature's Control

I have had many calls on the advisability of releasing the sharp shinned hawk pictured in the Sunday Colonist. It is true that the bird is a swift and sure killer, living almost entirely on other birds.

To justify my actions I must point out that I am keenly interested in the study of migratory birds and all wild life in general. This bird now is a banded living scientific specimen which at some time in the future may be shot or come to hand and important information may be obtained.

On the other hand, this hawk is part of nature's control; survival of the fittest. The slow, the careless and the sick fall prey to these natural hunters and thus are not used in breeding and reproducing their kind. I am a hunter; I harvest game birds and animals. I feel that it is essential to do so for their own well-being, as man has so interfered with their natural habitat that left alone they would soon over-browse their range and nature would take its course. I once heard it said by a friend of mine that "when a man destroys man's work of art he is called a culprit or a criminal. When he destroys God's works of art he is called a sportsman." We have no right to kill without good reason.

Dental Health

In discussing dental health, the main theme should consist of the major contributing factors that produce and maintain sound healthy teeth, and to what degree each factor contributes; the authority responsible for the findings.

Of equal importance are the major factors that contribute to the production and formation of inferior or abnormal tooth structure, also the major contributing factors to tooth caries and tooth decay, and to what degree each factor contributes; the authority responsible for the findings.

What is meant by findings is expressed statements confirmed, not information implied by suggestion or association.

Cricket Records

In the Jan. 24 issue of the Colonist you publish an account of an alleged record cricket score of 337 runs, made by a Pakistani batsman. You also refer to another alleged record cricket score of 364, made by Sir Leonard Hutton.

Neither of these scores is a record. The record cricket score in first-class cricket was made by A. C. Maclaren playing for Lancashire. The score was 424 not out.

I am not aware of the exact date of this record score, but it was 45 or 50 years ago.

To Pave Summit Road

U.K. Suggests Old Channels

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's proposals for arranging an East-West summit meeting go before the NATO permanent council in Paris this week — possibly today, an informed source said Tuesday night.

He said Prime Minister Macmillan will suggest the summit conference could be prepared through diplomatic talks as an alternative to a foreign ministers' meeting.

It is understood that besides being submitted to NATO, Macmillan's letter to Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin is being discussed in Ankara by State Secretary Dulles of the United States and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, who are attending a Baghdad Pact conference.

Macmillan's letter, replying to one from Bulganin Jan. 9, will be sent to Moscow immediately after it is discussed by the NATO council.

Proposals annexed to the second Bulganin letter made it clear Russia is prepared to contemplate a foreign ministers' conference after but not before a heads-of-government meeting.

Britain has dropped a few hints lately that she will not insist, as some other Western governments have done, on a foreign ministers' meeting in advance of a summit conference.

Russian Proposal Rejected by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department Tuesday rejected a suggestion of Nikita Khrushchev that East-West leaders seek to settle easy problems first at a summit conference and then tackle tougher issues.

A department spokesman told a press conference the United States is standing firm on its view that lower-level conferences are necessary before any East-West summit meeting.

The spokesman, press officer Lincoln White, commented on remarks Khrushchev made Monday night at a Moscow cocktail party as well as a speech the Soviet leader made last Wednesday in Minsk.

"We presume that the Soviet Union will reply to the serious proposals put forward by President Eisenhower in his reply of Jan. 12," said White.

He said he did not consider Khrushchev's recent speeches "adequate" replies.

Nehru Losing Ground, Says Expert

'Left Wing May Rule India'

There is a danger that a left-wing coalition of Communists and Socialist fellow-travellers will eventually gain power in India, Major John Crossthwaite, word traveller and former Indian Army officer, warned in Victoria yesterday.

Prime Minister Nehru's Congress party has steadily lost ground in recent years, Maj. Crossthwaite said. Right-wing factions have voted with the Congress party in India's parliament. But left-wing elements could gain control.

Maj. Crossthwaite, a veteran of the Indian Army and the Nizam of Hyderabad's private army, spoke to directors and guests of Victoria branch, Royal Commonwealth Society, at the home of Maj. and Mrs. H. C. Holmes, 336 Newport.

Mrs. Helen Crossthwaite, a Singhalese from Ceylon wearing a red-and-yellow sari, also spoke to the meeting. Maj. and Mrs. Crossthwaite, who now live on the Island of Jersey in the Channel Islands, spend several months each year travelling.

India's finances are wobbly, Maj. Crossthwaite said. The nation spends one-third of its budget on its armed forces, aimed entirely at Pakistan. India's first five-year plan for rural development and irrigation has fallen far short of its target.

Nehru is seeking to borrow large sums abroad, "without strings," to complete the first five-year plan and launch a second in which emphasis will be on industrialization.

Now that Indian forces occupy part of Kashmir, Indian dam-builders are preparing to shut off the flow of at least one of the five rivers that flow into Pakistan. There is danger that when the dams and diversions are completed, fertile areas of the Punjab will become desert.

Unless the Kashmir dispute is settled before India shuts off the water, there is danger that Pakistan will go to war.

Nehru, respected in India for his honesty, patriotism and vigorous leadership, has named no successor. He is 69. Much of the government's power is in his hands. Unless he does choose a successor, a period of chaos could follow his death.

The election of Solomon Bandaranaike's left-wing government in the island dominion of Ceylon was not as great a disaster as some people imagined, Mrs. Crossthwaite said.

Bound by a promise to take some Communists into his cabinet, the prime minister accepted two. Only one is left now, in a cabinet of 14.

Britain, pressed by the Bandaranaike government, has agreed to give up her bases on the island. But the agreement does not take effect for five years—by which time the complexion of the government may have changed.

Civil Defence Pleased

Ambulance Course Attendance Growing

Greater Victoria civil defence officials are "very pleased" with the growing interest in the civil defence ambulance attendant-training course.

When the course started last week, only five women enrolled but the class has grown to 18 women and if new enrollments continue, a second class will be started.

Mrs. E. R. Grant, head of the ambulance course, said the women will receive training in emergency first aid in the six week training period.

"This type of first aid is useful in every home as well as in time of national disaster," she said.

Those taking the course will have an opportunity to receive more advanced training in ambulance driving during the summer months.

Any Greater Victoria women interested in taking the course on Wednesday nights at civil defence headquarters are asked to call Mrs. Grant at 2-2279.

Don't Offend Risk Capital B.C. Warned

VANCOUVER (CP)—The retiring president of Vancouver Stock Exchange Tuesday warned the Exchange's annual meeting that risk capital may not always be available to British Columbia.

"We can certainly kill the goose that laid the golden eggs, either by inadvisable tampering with the laws of tenure of property, or by taxing industry and industrial capital to the point of despair in its ability to earn a fair return," said W. E. Thomson.

Mr. Thomson said there was a tendency in B.C. to adopt the U.S. views of economics without considering that B.C. must export from 75 to 95 per cent of its chief products, while the U.S. need export less than 10 per cent.

N. R. Whittal was elected president, succeeding Mr. Thomson, and T. E. Pilkington was named vice-president.

New Home for Irene White

Climax of 10 months of weekend work by a group of friends, including the Nanaimo lacrosse team, came about Saturday for Mrs. Irene White and her two children when she received the keys to a new $9,000 four-room home at Nanaimo. Mrs. White's husband, Tommy, a member of the Canadian champion Timbermen, was killed in a highway accident on Christmas Eve, 1956. Since then, members of the Nanaimo Lacrosse Association inaugurated a building drive, the lot and some materials were donated and volunteers did the actual work. With Mrs. White is two-year-old son, Terry. —(Nanaimo photo)

Campanella Operation Success But Baseball Future in Doubt

By HENRY LOGEMAN

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (UP)—Roly-poly Roy Campanella, star catcher of the Los Angeles Dodgers, suffered a broken neck in an auto accident yesterday, but doctors said it was "possible" he might be able to play baseball again.

The happy-go-lucky 36-year-old star had two vertebrae fractured in his neck in the early morning hours when his rented car skidded on wet pavement at the crest of a hill.

For a half-hour the stunned and moaning ballplayer was pinned "twisted like a pretzel" in the wreckage of the car; then he was taken to Glen Cove Community Hospital for a four-and-a-half-hour operation by a team of five doctors.

After the operation Dodger president Walter O'Malley announced, "the prayers of a great many people have been answered. The prognosis is hopeful."

Dr. Robert W. Sengstaken, 35-year-old neurological physician who headed the team of operating doctors, reported that Campanella was paralyzed "from the lower shoulders down."

END OF CAREER?

The doctor said he expects Campanella to make a "recovery to a normal state." Asked if that prediction meant that the husky Negro star might return to the baseball diamond some day, the doctor said he did "not rule that out," that it was "possible."

"It is also possible that he may not recover from the paralysis," said Dr. Sengstaken. "Assuming a complete recovery, he could not play ball before a year. He's foolish if he tries to continue to play baseball, but he's not my patient and I'm not going to tell him what to do."

O'Malley, who hastened to the hospital with other Dodger officials when word of the accident reached them, said that Campanella was expected to stay in the hospital about six weeks. Asked whether he thought Campanella could catch again, O'Malley said, "we are not interested in that right now. We are only concerned with his future welfare."

JUST MISSED DEATH

Dr. Sengstaken revealed that Campanella escaped death only by inches. He said that the fifth and sixth vertebrae of the spinal column were "fractured and dislocated" at about the neckline.

Had the injury been "an inch or two higher, with a fracture of the fourth cervical vertebrae, Campanella would have died instantly," Dr. Sengtaken said.

Dr. Sengstaken said that a key factor in Campanella's case was that the spinal cord had escaped injury and was "entirely normal." The broken vertebrae were pressing on the cord and part of the operation was to relieve that pressure.

The doctor said the operation took somewhat longer because of Campanella's "thick muscular neck," but added that these extra-tough muscles saved him from injury that "might have been much worse."

Later in his recovery, Campanella will be required to wear a "four-poster brace" on his neck with a cup under the chin.

DOCTOR NEARBY

The accident occured at about 3.30 a.m. (EST) while Campanella was driving from his Harlem liquor store to his home near here. Fortunately for Campanella, the accident occured in front of the home of a physician, Dr. W. Spencer Gurnee, who crawled into the wreckage to give him first aid while ambulance attendants worked to free him.

Dr. Sengstaken said no further operations were planned on Campanella "in the immediate future," but added that "there might have to be another one later on."

O'Malley had been hopeful that Campanella, bothered in recent years by injured hands, might make a comeback this year in the Dodgers' first season in Los Angeles, especially with a short left field fence in the Los Angeles Coliseum, a good target for his home runs.

Campanella was the league's most valuable player in 1951, 1953 and 1955.

In 1953, Campanella hit 41 home runs, most ever recorded by a catcher. The same year his 142 runs batted in also set a record for catchers.

He was seven times a member of the National League all-star team.

Campanella also was the highest paid player in Dodger history in 1956 when he signed a $42,500 contract. His 1958 contract, signed last November, called for $36,500. He batted only .242 last year and hit but 13 homers.

Campanella joined Dodgers in 1948, as the third negro on a team that already included Jackie Robinson and Don Newcombe.

Wait for News

Sitting in front of an oil painting of her baseball-playing husband, Mrs. Roy Campanella waits with children Ruth, 4, and Tony, 7, for word of the condition of the Los Angeles Dodger catcher. Campanella suffered a fractured neck in a car crash not far from his home early Tuesday and it's quite likely that his baseball career has ended.—(AP photofax)

Cougars to Use Hart Tonight; Americans End Losing Streak

Still refusing to concede that his club can't get a winning streak started that will at least bring it close to a playoff position, coach Pat Egan will have his Victoria Cougars gunning for the points at Memorial Arena tonight in a Western Hockey League game against New Westminster Royals.

"We've got a better club than those standings show," Egan maintains "and we're going to win a lot more hockey games before this season is over."

Egan has decided to retain the Ed Dorohoy-Gordie Haworth-Doug Macauley lines for tonight's game.

That means that Art Hart, lanky young forward obtained in a deal with Seattle Americans for Frank Milne and Blinky Boyce, will make his first start as a Cougar on right-wing as part of a line which will include Stan Baliuk and Burl Syverson.

There could, however, be changes before the game is over and there will be changes for Saturday's game against the Americans. Doug Anderson will probably make his first start of the season Saturday and it will likely be at his old spot at centre.

Egan will be the 15th player tonight in a defence realignment. He will pair Rags Raglan with Nels Bulloch and John Yanchuk with Carl Kaiser. When Anderson joins the club, the Cougars will be one player over the limit. Who will go may depend on performance in tonight's game.

BOYALS GET HELP

Royals expect to be bolstered for tonight's game by the addition of Vic Dzurko, 22-year-old defenceman obtained from Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League for the balance of the season.

Dzurko, a 200-pounder who played 34 games for the Calgary Stampeders last season, will replace veteran Jim Bedard in the New Westminster lineup.

Last night, the Americans made the Cougar chances that much dimmer by ending a four-game losing streak with a 5-3 triumph over the Canucks at Vancouver.

Down, 2-3, starting the third period, the Americans got three more goals past Marcel Pelletier, two of them in the late minutes.

Phil Maloney scored the best goal of the game midway through the first period to give Canucks a 1-0 lead. Americans went ahead with two quick goals in the second period but Canucks came back with two of their own.

Pelletier looked bad on Lionel Repka's shot early in the third period and it got by him for the tying goal. Bill MacFarland scored what proved to be the winner and Guyle Fielder got the clincher after Canucks had taken Pelletier out for a sixth attacker.

Ex-Cougars figured prominently in the Seattle win. Both Boyce, who played well throughout, and Milne got an assist while Don Chiupka set up two goals and Alex Kuzma got a goal and an assist.

AT THE 19th

With Harry Young

Some Vancouver Island amateurs may be chosen to play in the pro-amateur competition which precedes the big Centennial Open at Point Grey next Aug. 27.

At the BCGA annual meeting in Vancouver Friday, Bob Kidd, chairman of the tournament committee, disclosed that the 50 amateurs to be chosen for this event were: 10 celebrities; 20 players from the Greater Vancouver area; eight players from Zons 1, 3 and 4 (which includes Vancouver Island and the interior); and 12 to be picked by the sponsors.

As the handicap limit is 14, it is evident that golfing excellence alone will not be the deciding qualification.

Bob Kidd when asked declined to divulge how the selection would be made.

At the meeting it was interesting, although rather discouraging, to find that in most places except Victoria some special centennial golfing event have been arranged for this summer.

In addition to the big affair at Point Grey, the Zone 3 officials are putting on an Interior Centennial Golf Trail Open to amateurs—up to handicap 12—and professionals, with about $5,200 offered in prizes.

The itinerary offers variety. First round will be played at Kamloops (Tuesday, Aug. 19), the second round at Vernon (Wednesday); the third round at Penticton (Thursday) and the final round at Kelowna (Friday). Lap prizes as well as for the winning four-round aggregates are being awarded.

The Trail will be followed Saturday and Sunday by the ever-popular Ogopogo tournament at Kelowna.

The Nanaimo centennial effort is to extend its annual Zone 1 and Mid-Island Championship meeting into a two-day, 72-hole affair. It will be played Saturday and Sunday, June 14-15. It is open to players with handicaps of 12 and under. Sponsors believed that the extra day will make the competition more attractive to out-of-town players for whom the one day schedule was always too much of a rush.

It was also disclosed at the BCGA meeting that the 1959 Canadian Amateur Championship is likely to be played at Marine Drive, Vancouver.

RCGA BACKS TEAM. The Royal Canadian Golf Association is going to spend $15,000 on sending a team to South Africa next year to take part in the second Commonwealth golf tournament.

The first contest of the kind—in which Canadian, South African, Australian, New Zealand and British amateur golfers took part—was played at St. Andrews three years ago, and was a tremendous success.

A six-man team will be sent from Canada.

The Victoria District Golf Committee is on record as being anxious to have the Commonwealth event staged in Victoria when it comes Canada's turn to play host.

* * *

NEW FLAGSTICKS NEEDED. The new flagstick rule—although it isn't really new any more—is not liked by many golfers, including B.C.'s representative to the RCGA, Hilliard Lyle.

At the annual meeting of the BCGA Mr. Lyle said he hoped that the rule-making authorities would see their way to restore the old rule.

"Much of the wear around the holes is caused by players who now make sure the flagstick is centred before playing their shots," he said.

Dr. George Bigelow, former president of the BCGA, expressed the view that the new rule would have no objections if all clubs availed themselves of the new narrow diameter metal stick ends in use on most leading courses.

DONALDSONS WIN AGAIN. The Donaldson brothers of Gorge Vale made a second successful defence of the city open buttons at Uplands Sunday when they defeated Ron Cush and Allan McLeod, also of Gorge Vale, by 3 and 1. Art Donaldson shot a par 70 for the best individual round.

Next challengers are Toad Garnet and Dr. Roger Ross, and this all-Gorge Vale affair is due at the Victoria Golf Club Sunday.

In the junior buttons Roy Chappel and Jim McColl jr. were also successful. They made a fourth defence against Al Manson and Peter Watson of Victoria, beating them 4 and 3.

AROUND THE CLUBS. Don Ross, president of Royal Colwood, was elected by acclamation as a Victoria district director of the BCGA at last week's annual meeting . . . Joe Howarth, president of the BCGA, says club members contributed $1,142 through levies for the junior golf development program . . . Chick Duncan, who used to play at Uplands and has recently been assistant pro to Henry Martell at Edmonton, has been appointed pro at Wascana, Regina . . . Harold Husband, who has more holes in one than any other amateur in Victoria shot his best round—69—in the weekly par competition there, leaving him an easy winner at nine up.

Warriors remained two points ahead of the second-place Edmonton Flyers but now have played an extra game.

It was another fast, crowd-pleasing game in which both goalkeepers, Calgary's Al Rollins and Ray Mikulan of the Warriors, played standout hockey.

Stamps scored both their goals in the first period, ex-Warrior George Ford getting the first when Mikulan moved a bit slowly on a shot from the right boards. Remarkable Endurance Key To Konrads' Swim Success

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The secret of the amazing Konrads kids in their recent battering of world swimming records is natural ability—and lots of heart.

Tests made on 13-year-old Ilsa Konrads and her 15-year-old brother John show their hearts are so big and strong that their endurance is far greater than normal.

Swimming coach Forbes Carlile checked the youngsters on an instrument called a heartometer, which can measure the ability of the heart to pump oxygen-carrying blood through the body as it is needed in times of exertion.

The tests showed Ilsa's heart can stand up under strain much better than many men of 20, and pumps blood at a far greater rate than any other Australian woman swimmer tested.

John's heart shows the same characteristics.

"Before long they should completely dominate Australian swimming," Carlile said. Today, that virtually means world swimming.

Ilsa gained international notice when she finished half a yard behind Olympic champion and world record holder Lorraine Crapp of Australia in the 440-yard freestyle final of the recent New South Wales championships.

Two days later, the five-foot, five-inch, 119-pound girl cracked Lorraine's world records for 880 yards and 800 metres in her first competitive race over the half-mile distance.

John, a five-foot, nine-inch, 168-pounder, broke into the act Jan. 11 when he smashed American George Breen's world marks for 880 yards and 800 metres with a time of 9.17.7. Breen's time for the distance was 9.19.2.

Four days later, John wiped out Australian Olympic champion Murray Rose's world standards for 440 yards and 400 metres with a clocking of 4.25.9.

"We did not go out of our way to make Ilsa and John swimmers," said Mrs. Konrads. "I can't swim. My husband can swim, but only the way most Australians can swim."

Five years ago Ilsa could just paddle across the local pool at Bankstown, a Sydney suburb. John could swim about half the length.

One day the two Konrads youngsters asked coach Don Talbot to teach them to swim properly.

Talbot did just that and although he said both were natural swimmers, he kept the pair out of competition until he felt they were strong enough to race without over-straining themselves.

"Sometimes I felt like going to another coach and asking him to let me swim in a race," said John. "But Ilsa and my mother and father said I should do as Don said."

BERNIE GEOFFRION
. . . freak injury

Hard-Luck Geoffrion Sidelined By Freak Accident in Practice

Bernie "Boom-Boom" Geoffrion, a hard-luck guy who has only once in seven seasons managed to play a complete National Hockey League schedule, yesterday underwent a successful operation following an injury which will almost certainly put him out of action for the rest of this season.

Geoffrion, who was the leading goal-scorer in the NHL at the time of his injury with 27 scoring shots, was hurt yesterday morning in a freak accident during a [illegible] practice session.

Complete details of the accident have not been given but it occurred when Geoffrion collided with Andre Pronovost from behind.

Pronovost had taken the puck from Geoffrion and the latter was skating at full speed trying to get it back when the [illegible]

Geoffrion collapsed on the ice and was rushed to hospital for examination. It was discovered there that he had suffered a ruptured bowel. The emergency operation, which lasted two hours, was termed a success by Dr. Lawrence Hampson, team physician.

Dr. Hampson said that it was impossible to state how long Geoffrion would be out of action but it was expected that it would be at least two months before the hard-shooting right-winger would be able to play again.

RASH OF INJURIES

Geoffrion's is another in the unprecedented number of injuries suffered this season by Canadiens. Maurice "Rocket" Richard was hurt after 14 games and is still out of action. Floyd Curry has been out for most of the season and Jean Beliveau and Henri Richard, top centres in the NHL, have also been sidelined along with all-star defenceman Doug Harvey.

Geoffrion, it seemed, was about to have his biggest season. He missed several games earlier in the season because of other injuries but he hit top form just at the time the Canadiens had to get along without both the elder Richard and Beliveau.

During a three-week stretch, Geoffrion came out of nowhere to move into contention for the scoring championship. He is currently in third place, only [illegible] nine points behind Dickie Moore and six points behind Henri Richard, two teammates who now seem to have the fight for league honors to themselves.

Snead Scores Pro Circuit As 'Push-Button Operation'

NEW YORK (AP)—The professional golf tour has become a stereotyped, push-button operation without much of its old glamour, Sam Snead said Tuesday.

The hillybilly professional from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., here to be honored by metropolitan golf writers, said tight rules and regulations are robbing the game of its individualism.

"When you step out on a tee nowadays you don't have to just worry about hitting the ball," Snead said. "You have to watch your P's and Q's in conduct.

"If you try a practice putt you may be fined $50. If you use a little polite profanity you get stuck for $75 or $100. Get sore and break a club and it may cost you $500.

"It's a good thing they don't have lip readers out on the course. I'd go broke in fines."

Snead made his criticism in the presence of Ed Carter, tournament director of the Professional Golfers' Association and the man who helped to install the new directives.

Carter defended the measures as necessary to protect sponsors and spectators in a sport which has mushroomed into a $1,000,000 business. In recent years there have been repeated fines for displays of temper in tournament play.

"Why, if these rules were in effect in Walter Hagen's day he'd probably have been thrown out of golf for some of his antics—arriving late at the tee and so forth," Snead said. But the people loved him for it and he became a character."

Tide Seeks Revenge; Hosts UBC Saturday

Victoria Crimson Tide, which took a 34-6 drubbing at the hands of UBC Thunderbirds in their first McKechnie Cup rugby meeting, will have a chance for revenge Saturday when Doug Bray's city team hosts the improving Birds at Macdonald Park at 2.30.

The Victorians have suffered two straight defeats in the double round-robin competition and must win Saturday to retain their slim chances for the championship.

City School Runners Start Busy Schedule

Victoria High School's powerful cross-country team will start a rugged schedule of events this afternoon when Gordie Hartley's crew meets Shawnigan Lake Boys' School in a four-mile run at the up-Island school.

Big event of the winter season will be the B.C. high school cross country championships in Victoria March 15. Victoria High will be defending its title against schools from all parts of the province.

The Vic High runners host Shawnigan Lake and University School Feb. 5, meet South Burnaby and Lestern Pearson on Feb. 14 and compete against St. George's, Vancouver Tech and UBC on Feb. 15. Both races will be on the Mainland.

Other events include the annual Victoria High-University School race around Mt. Tolmie on Feb. 26 and the Canadian Legion five-mile run March 26.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Some activity in flax and rye marked trading.

Flax trade produced some export support and there were offerings by commission houses and some American selling at times. Prices were irregular.

Oats and barley trade was light with a few routine domestic orders. Prices moved in a narrow range.

Rye trade was a little more active following reports of small sales to Scandinavian countries. Prices were fairly steady.

NO. 40—HUNDREDTH YEAR | VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1958 | SECOND NEWS SECTION

Sharp Knife, Clever Hands Create B.C. Bird Beauty

Victoria woman carver Lillian Sweeney creates lifelike birds from balsa wood. Here she whittles the birds into a rough form. Later she will complete carving and painting. She has carved everything from scheech owls to hummingbirds. Her models are mainly birds that visit her window feeding tray. Penknife and paint creations of Victoria artist include penguins, but most are native B.C. birds. She has been carving birds for 11 years.—(Colonist photos by Jim Ryan.)

Birds in Balsa Bonny but Mute

City Artist Whittles Her Own B.C. Aviary

BY BARNEY McKINLEY

Birds of a feather are made of balsa wood by Victoria carver and artist Lillian Sweeney, 1028 Park Boulevard.

To date she has carved more than 100 startlingly lifelike duplications in wood of real birds, many of which she observes at first hand when they visit a window feeding tray at her home.

Her ambition is to carve and paint reproductions of all B.C. species of birds, but with hundreds to work on she admits the job will take considerable whittling.

Most of the creations to date have been given away or sold, but there are always enough in her home studio to make a visitor think he has walked into a deep freeze aviary.

The list includes everything from screech owls to hummingbirds, bluejays to golden-crowned nuthatches. Most of the birds are native to B.C. types to exact life scale.

But Mrs. Sweeney has also found time to create two life-sized ringneck pheasants plus a macaw and three miniature penquins who are definitely not B.C.-breds.

Mrs. Sweeney, now 72 has been creating birds in balsa since she retired 11 years ago after an 11-year stint with the Provincial Museum.

The museum job was a chapter in an artist's life that started with first lessons at nine, studies at Mark Hopkins Art School in San Francisco and in Chicago.

A charter member of the Arts and Crafts group in Victoria she was a friend of the late Emily Carr.

Her work with the museum as a part-time aide and as a steady employee included such chores as carving and painting models of six-foot sharks and the creation of models of a house fly, mosquito, black widow spider and earwig—20 times life size.

But nowadays she is specializing in birds using the window tray observations, bird books and bird skins borrowed from the museum to help her achieve perfect replicas.

Gun-Toting Thug Routed by Woman

NANAIMO — A gun-toting thug fled from the Queen's Hotel Monday night when a calm female desk clerk pressed a warning buzzer.

"Are you kidding?" Mrs. Hazel Fiddick said to the man, who went up to the counter and asked to have a cheque cashed, but produced a gun from his pocket instead of the cheque.

He demanded she hand over the money in the hotel till, but ran when Mrs. Fiddick pressed a buzzer that brought bartender Martin Besta into the lobby.

She described him as about 23 and not wearing a mask.

Police believe he was "an amateur" holdup man.

Nobody Sleeps Near Dance Hall

PORT ALBERNI—Police will be asked to look into complaints of damage and noise from residents living near a local dance hall.

A letter from Gordon Redlack stated that his fence and garage doors had been smashed, and that hollering, obscene language, horn-tooting, roaring motors, rattling of bottles and squealing of tires continues to 2 a.m.

He lives across from Nordly Centre on Bute Street.

Ald. W. C. Hamilton reported that one man is afraid to leave his house on nights when a dance is in session.

Malahat Ready in Spring

The Malahat highway will be complete "as soon as possible after April 1," deputy highways minister Evan S. Jones promised the Victoria Automobile Club yesterday.

He told the annual meeting the highways department had asked the contractor to hurry up the job but added that any appreciable step-up is impossible because of the cost to the government.

"I sincerely wish to apologize for the condition of the Malahat," Mr. Jones said.

He complained that the work done on the base processing of the highway has deteriorated in many places because of heavy fall rains.

Turning to other Vancouver Island highways, the deputy minister said that although the Port Renfrew road has been completed as a forest access road, it will need a lot of work before the public will enjoy it.

Mr. Jones said the Alberni-Tofino road is expected to be complete and open in the late summer or early fall.

Survey crews are working on the highway extension from Sayward to Port Hardy, he said, but it has not yet been decided whether to put the road along the coast or inland.

NANAIMO—If a new hospital is built in Nanaimo, the present establishment will be turned into an institution for patients with chronic illnesses.

This announcement was made yesterday by hospital administrator Gordon Frith, who said the hospital board had no intention of selling out to private interests.

Talking Politics

MISSILE FIZZLE: Attorney-General Robert Bonner fell into a trap of his own making when he stretched a little too far in trying to illustrate how the government felt about Opposition Leader Robert Strachan's rip-roaring criticisms the day before.

It was a wild speech, said the attorney-general, even if it was expected to be the forefront of a massive attack on government policy.

"It shows that the Republican party is not the only party which has trouble getting its rockets off the ground," said Mr. Bonner. Not too many members saw the point.

"That one didn't get off the ground, did it?" shot back Mr. Strachan.

* * *

MEMORIES LINGER ON: One of the most respected members of the legislature, prior to his death more than a year ago, was the late Ernest Winch, veteran CCF member for Burnaby. Yesterday his son-in-law, Cedric Cox, made his maiden speech.

The new member, who retained the Burnaby seat for the CCF, reminded the House of his father-in-law's accomplishments for the sick, needy and aged.

"Just six weeks ago, not knowing of the death of Mr. Winch, an invitation was received from a committee of the U.S. Senate asking him to appear before that body to give an address on housing for senior citizens," Mr. Cox told the members. "I believe this is an honor rarely received by any other member in Canada."

QUESTION TIME: The opposition didn't have much success when they asked yesterday if Premier Bennett would just "consider" permitting an oral question period every day, following the custom in the House of Commons.

CCF leader Robert Strachan said he was only asking the premier to consider the matter "and perhaps in a few days he could let the House know his feelings." It would create more interest, he said, and would greatly add to the standing and the conduct of the legislature.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner answered. The question was not properly addressed, he said, and there was a ruling on the records from the spring session of 1953.

"In other words, no," said Mr. Strachan, giving up the fight.

* * *

ECONOMY WITH EFFICIENCY: Is the government saving money on the printing of bills this year? It would certainly appear so.

So far this session, nearly all of the bills presented are printed on a single sheet of paper, with the front page title sheet conspicuous by its absence.

* * *

WORDS OF WISDOM: When one or two CCFers began interrupting the speech of Attorney-General Bonner yesterday they were told: "Even a dry speech from this part of the floor is having some effect."

It was. Lots of members had left the legislature for coffee.

Canada Will Spend $5,539,741,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Fleming Tuesday asked Parliament for a further appropriation of $187,571,000 in the current fiscal year ending March 31. The amount would boost federal outlays over the $5,500,000,000 mark for the first time in history.

The appropriation request, made in a list of new spending estimates tabled in the Commons would bring to $5,539,741,000 the expenditure program for the year.

The total exceeds, for the first time, the $5,322,000,000 which Parliament voted in the wartime year of 1943-44. It compares with the previous peace-time high of $5,157,000,000 in the 1956-57 fiscal year.

This year's expenditures have been pushed up largely through increases in the social security program in which the biggest items were two boosts last year in the old age security pensions paid to all at age 70.

NOW $55 MONTH

Payments of this pension, now $55 a month, are expected to total some $477,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

This amount, reflected in the $5,539,741,000 total, does not enter into government budgetary accounts since the pensions are paid from a special old age security fund which is financed by special tax levies.

COVER DEFICIT

However, the supplementary estimates tabled Tuesday include a $103,000,000 item to cover the anticipated deficit in the fund for the full year. This deficit will be written off against general government revenues.

Officials said the write-off, together with the other supplementary estimates, will tend to reduce the $80,000,000 budgetary surplus forecast by Mr. Fleming last month.

Tuesday's addition to the spending program is expected to be the last for the current year.

Sailor-Taxpayer Hits Library Rule

A Saanich landowner, whose municipal taxes help support Victoria Public Library claims he has been refused the right to get a borrower's card the same as other people because he is in the navy.

Coun. Charles Nelles, Saanich council's representative on the library board, will bring the matter before the next meeting of the board.

W. L. Scott, 324 Kamloops Avenue, claims he was told that as he was in the navy he could only be issued a card by giving his next of kin and his commanding officer as references.

Alternatively, he was told, he can use books borrowed on regular cards held by his wife or children.

"I believe that being a taxpayer and paying for the library I have the rights and should be able to choose my own references," Mr. Scott said.

Librarian John Lort commented last night that naval officials understood the library's regulations regarding servicemen and were in wholehearted agreement with them.

March Needs 50 Mothers

Fifty mothers still are needed as canvassers in the Foul Bay and James Bay districts during the one-hour Mothers' March on Polio in Greater Victoria from 6.30 to 7.30 p.m. Saturday.

Volunteers are urged to telephone 5-6748.

Principal Kills Self

NEW YORK—The harried principal of a school where a rape and two assaults took place last week jumped to death yesterday from the roof of his apartment building.

The victim, George Goldfarb, 55, principal of John Marshall Junior High School in Brooklyn, took his life hours before he was to testify before a grand jury investigating violence in schools.

Newspaper clippings reporting violence at his school were found in his pockets.

A board of education statement said the incidents "tended to injure the reputation of the school he loved and made more difficult the arduous task faced by him and his teachers."

Can't Always Be Quick Says Chief

Quick solutions are not always found, Esquimalt's Chief Constable Gilbert Stancombe says.

His department is still investigating two recent events in Esquimalt which were still mysteries last night.

One is the disappearance, last Dec. 21, of $12,000 in cheques and cash from a beer parlor office; the other is last week's apparent attempt to burn Esquimalt High School by setting four separate fires in different parts of the building.

"We're still working on both cases," the chief said, "and the fire marshal's office is also working on the fires. Right now, however, there's no answer in sight.

"Sometimes it takes a long time to catch up to them," the chief told Esquimalt police commission the other night, "but sooner or later it seems to leak out."

Strict Accounts Are Essential In Economizing

By FRANCES THOMPSON

Doubtless you read with keen interest as I did a recent article in this paper by Peter Bratton on how a couple of sex kept food expenses down to $70 a month. Naturally, I copped the article and was about to comment on it. I make the correspondent who wrote a letter to the Editor last Saturday saying it couldn't be done. I was going to agree with the housewife who actually does it.

While chewing the end of my pencil this morning I decided for a change of words the most extraordinary thing happened. This is the gospel truth and yet another proof of some higher power beyond our comprehension. Listen to this. The phone rang and I said, dial it.

Believe it or not, it was the very woman who had given the story to our paper. You can't tell me that was just a coincidence. While she wishes to remain anonymous she cheerfully gave me her name, address and telephone number so that I am assured the story is absolutely authentic. We talked for ages but it was time very well spent and I want to give you the highlights of our motto-filled conversation.

Admittedly Mrs. X has the edge on some of you for she is a fellow dietitian. In consequence she is an imaginative cook but what is infinitely more important, she understands the science of nutrition. In so far as we know it today. Scrupulously avoiding any form of waste she prepares meals that her complete loyalty was the keenest in the neighborhood.

As you have read from her story, she consistently buys the cheaper cuts of meat for she knows as I've so often said, they are just as nutritious though they do take more preparation. She makes quantities of home-made soups, lays heavy on the less expensive varieties of fish, on eggs, cheese, peanut butter and powdered milk. The mother of four is a woman after my own heart in that she uses lots of wheat germ and has oatmeal buying such products in bulk rather than in packaged form.

Rather hesitatingly I asked if her children ranging in age from 2 to 8 years kept well. "My doctor says was the laughing reply, if all his patients were as healthy as my children he would soon go broke."

So take my heart my good friends. This reader has proved beyond doubt you can eat well and economically if you put your mind to it and the column will help in every possible way. "But tell them," Mrs. X concluded, "it is essential to keep strict accounts."

Obviously after the foregoing chat, we are going to feature a very economical family meal this morning. I have no name for its basic main course so will invent one . . .

SURPRISE LOAF

One cashpot small loaf of bread, preferably whole-meal, melted margarine, 1 to 1½ tomatoes, about 1 cup diced cooked carrots, 1 cup boiled cooked meat, ground or finely chopped, 1 medium onion, finely sliced, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, salt and pepper, 2 hard-cooked eggs, breadcrumbs, grated cheese, 1 cup stock or left-over gravy.

Cut top off loaf, scoop out the centre with a sharp knife and save for breadcrumbs. Brush inside of loaf with melted margarine. Place it in a hot oven for a few minutes until it is crisp. Skin or peel and slice the tomatoes and arrange half of them in bottom of the loaf. Then add a layer of carrots, meat, onion and parsley, season well, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with sliced eggs and cover them arrange the remaining tomato slices. Sprinkle generously with a mixture of breadcrumbs and grated cheese. Heat the stock and pour in. Bake in a moderate oven about 20 minutes. Serve hot with thick gravy. Why not include some wheat germ in this recipe? I'd suggest about 1 tablespoon be sprinkled over each layer of ingredients.

As for the accompanying green vegetable how about a responsive form green cabbage, the tastiest green we can find. Use as little water as possible, cook a minute or two, drain, season with butter, lemon juice and herbs, apples for a mere two or three minutes. If you are cooking a lot of cabbage for a family use a large saucepan, so that the cabbage can be spread out thinly. If you follow the drain off the very small amount of water and drink it down.

TRICK OF THE DAY

We're getting rather low again on those grits so call "you come to our aid." Mrs. [illegible] of Duncan says:

When serving cooked beets cold they will keep fresh for quite a few days if a little is stored in a pot with the vinegar you pour over them.

Beware Leaf Curl

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

I've been yakking away all winter over the necessity of spraying that peach tree in your garden against the leaf curl disease but I can't resist getting in one more blast because with the mild weather we have had all the buds on the peach trees are swelling and will be showing pink almost any day now. When that happens you'll have missed the boat.

Peach leaf curl is a very common fungus disease here which causes the leaves to become distorted and blistered and to turn red and yellow and I'd venture to say that at least nine-tenths of all the unsprayed peach trees in Victoria lose their leaves every summer through this infection. Even if you don't spray anything else in the garden, this tree is an absolute must.

The sprays used to control this disease, a sterile dormant spray, are most effective when applied when the tree is completely dormant. This doesn't mean you can't spray for even in a normal year the peach is one of our earliest trees to open its buds.

You need a calm day for the job, preferably without much wind as it we don't get many such days at this time of the year you'd better have the spray materials on hand and all ready, so you can jump in and take advantage of any breaks in the weather.

Lime sulphur is an old reliable spray which does a satisfactory job against the leaf curl infection and the dry [illegible] ing to [illegible] teaspoonfuls per gallon of water. If you buy your lime sulphur in liquid form mix it according to the manufacturer's directions on the package. I can't give you the formula as the strength of the concentrates varies from one brand to another.

I should warn you though that lime sulphur will discolor painted surfaces and if your tree is trained up against the house wall you'll have to spread newspapers behind the branches to protect the paint or switch to a non-staining spray.

Neither very good spray in common use is 50 per cent copper polysulphide sold under the trade name of Orthocide. This spray contains a wetting agent making it "wetter than water" to quote the advertisements and lime lumps to make it stick on the branches better. This liquid form of copper is also sold under the name of Niagara Fruit Tree Dormant Spray and is used at the rate of one cupful per gallon of water. These sprays too will stain paint.

Copper is a specific against peach leaf curl and any of the copper sprays may be used such as Niagara Bordo Powder or Cil. Tri-Cop. I have had [illegible] powder formulated called Bursol, but I haven't seen it on any dealer's shelves for the last several years. These copper sprays are harmless to paint work and any temporary staining will wash off.

The chances are you won't get that calm windless day ideal for spraying and you'll have to get the job done regardless of wind. If you spray against the wind most of the spray will blow back into your face while if you apply it down wind it will pass through the bare branches of the tree too fast to be effective.

The trick now is to spray across the wind on the windward side of the tree, of course allowing the breeze to drift the cloud of spray into the heart of the tree. You must do a thorough job, making sure every last twig is covered for one tiny unsprayed portion can re-infect the whole tree.

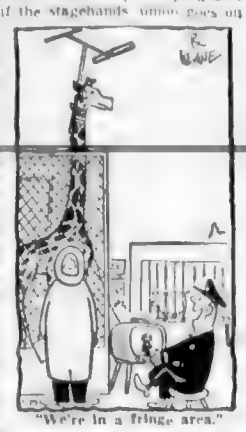
TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

Five major news items today:

First, in Toronto CBC officials say TV programs won't be affected even if the stagehands union goes on strike over the dismissal of 55 employees who refused to do certain work. Reason is that other unions won't strike and there are enough executives around to do the stagehands jobs. Second, in the U.S., the TV technical employees' union is threatening a strike Saturday for higher pay and shorter hours. This would affect most "live" network shows a delay for continuation of talks is expected.



Down in Washington, D.C., the rumor is that the U.S. Congress, too busy fighting sputniks and planning an election year budget, will sidestep action of pay TV and allow the FCC to go ahead with its three year test of the new system. Only other possibility is that Congress will direct the FCC to delay the test for a year.

Fourth the Congressional hearing to investigate possible outside influence of the FCC has let its steam. A move to find out if FCC members accepted TV sets as gifts has been dropped, and the caring will be confined to finding out if FCC is enacting its laws "without departing from the intent of Congress."

Finally in Hollywood for the first time movie producers, actors' unions and theatre owners have agreed to form a joint campaign to fight the sale of any more movies to TV.

* * *

TV BITS. There is much to see on TV today, although there are no specials. Details below . . . Sheaffer Pen company, taking a leaf from the DuPont book, wants to do one special show a month next season. Richard Adler, "Pajama Game" writer has been signed to write music for TV versions of "Little Women," and "Call of the Wild."

Network TV is not having a necessary hot CBC has lost sponsors for parts of four shows recently. Big Record, Perry Mason, Eve Arden, Playhouse 90 and NBC tightened up by firing three vice-presidents. Reason for all this is the surprising financial gain by ABC this season, which has especially cut NBC revenue . . . Cast of the US Hit Parade show has been renewed through the rest of this season . . . Roy Rogers and NBC have torn up their contract so the cowboy can do other things . . . CBS and columnist John Crosby have decided to call their association quits when Seven Lively Arts dies next month.

In One Combined Attack

Reds Now Able to Wipe Out 20,000,000 Americans

WASHINGTON (AP)—A scientist who directed a secret study of U.S. defences says the Russians now could mount a combined bomber-missiles submarine attack that could kill 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 Americans.

Dr. Ellis A. Johnson, director of the Johns Hopkins University operations research office, says U.S. defence against an immediate attack is very poor.

Johnson also says, in a copyrighted interview in the magazine U.S. News and World Report, an adequate defence would cost an extra $15,000,000,000 a year for an indefinite number of years.

The Johns Hopkins operations research office was set up 10 years ago to make scientific analyses of military problems. Under Johnson's direction, it conducted for the army a study of U.S. defences. The report of that study has not been made public.

In the interview, Johnson says he believes the Russians today could "throw several hundred bombers at us" and perhaps 50 or more missile-firing submarines—"and it would be more than adequate." He said he would expect them to be armed with nuclear weapons.

Johnson estimates that more than half the attackers would get through American defences, as now constituted. He says he assumes they would make the Strategic Air Command their principal target.

Seeks Cancer Vaccine

Elsie N. Ward, above, a research associate in bacteriology at the University of Pittsburgh, is associated with Dr. Jonas E. Salk in research aimed at finding a preventive cancer vaccine. Dr. Salk recently reported that new test tube technique he discovered while working on polio vaccine will help scientists work 100 times faster in key phase of cancer and other vital research. Technique deals with revolutionary way of measuring cell-destroying capacity of serum. It will enable inexperienced laboratory aides to do 100 times faster the kind of cell-watching that now requires hours of microscope-peering by skilled scientists.

Cancer Proof

Dr. Ernest L. Wynder of New York's Sloan-Kettering institute for cancer research, displays cancers on ear and neck of rabbit "painted" with tars condensed from cigaret smoke. This evidence was produced after experimentations with 65 rabbits over the entire life span of the animals—four to six years.

The annual Vancouver Island Indian Festival in May this year is expected to be the largest ever held here.

Percy Ross, festival president, said at least 25 tribes will be represented at the celebrations at Maple Bank Park on May 24 and 25.

Policy Change Hinted

U.K. Tories May Get Tough with Unions

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative government appears to have decided on a new and tough policy against British trade unions.

Newspaper and political pundits are saying the government tipped its hand with the rejection Sunday night by Labor Minister Ian MacLeod of a requested committee of inquiry to investigate a pay dispute within the 1,300,000-member Transport and General Workers Union.

The union asked for an inquiry into a claim for a 25 shilling-a-week ($3.50) pay raise for 53,000 London bus workers. The state-run London Transport Executive rejected the pay claim but agreed to a committee of inquiry.

MacLeod's rejection of the committee is regarded as a significant step — one that probably came from a cabinet decision.

PRECEDENT SET

TGWU secretary Frank Cousins said MacLeod himself had suggested the possibility of an inquiry into the wages of the whole road passenger transport industry.

He added: "This must be the first time in the history of British industrial relations when the two sides in a dispute have accepted a proposal from ministry officials aimed at seeking a solution—and find it turned down by the minister himself."

The Financial Times writes that MacLeod's move "will be regarded, in the trade union movement and outside, as the most significant indication so far of the toughness of the government's approach to wage claims."

The Liberal News Chronicle says the cabinet ordered MacLeod to kill the plan for a committee of inquiry. It adds that government and union leaders "face their most serious clash since the start of the Tory drive against pay claims."

Mrs. Jean Fisher was organizer of the special committee. Other members are Mrs. David Nightingale, assistant organizer, Gordon Ash, rabbit husbandry instructor and David Nightingale, procedure coach.

Executive of the new club for young rabbit breeders includes Peter Dixon, Deep Cove, president; Ralph Minekler, Langford, vice-president; Gary Jackson, Langford, secretary, and David Essery, Carey Road, treasurer.

Committee chairmen are Yvonne Fisher, Saanichton; Ronny Flatman, Glen Lake; Elizabeth Elgin, Townsend Drive; Lorne Fisher, Saanichton; Donny McDowell, Langford. Other members are Norman Elgin, Ruth Hunt, Marion McDowell, Gail Hickman, Billy and Robin Wheeler.

A breeding project has been planned by members and an annual George Pearkes challenge trophy will be presented to the boy or girl with the highest number of points.

Three New Scout Posts Proposed

Plan to decentralize administration of Scouting in the Victoria district has been taken a step further by the proposal of District Commissioner Lt.-Col. Reginald Girard to appoint three more assistant district commissioners.

They are W. H. Gibson, D. F. Mason and Charles Medley.

The executive approved sending their names to the provincial Scouting authority for official appointment.

Hamill Leads Air Officers

He succeeds H. J. (Whitey) McKay, 4650 Blenkinsop.

All former officers of Commonwealth or allied air forces may join the local section of the national organization, and, if interested, should call Mr. Mallett at 9-2344.

Big Parade

Expanded May Day Plans Set

Plans are proceeding for the annual May festival organized by Greater Victoria celebrations committee, Mrs. Ethel Bishop, secretary, said last night.

Some 40 bands, drill teams and business firms have been invited to enter the May Day parade to be held at 10 a.m. May 19. Acceptances have been received from Vernon girls' pipe band, Bellingham public schools band, Seattle police drill team and the Mount Baker school band.

A number of firms are expected to enter floats in the parade to mark centennial year.

Tentative arrangements for the two-day festival are:

Sunday: Crowning of the queen at 2 p.m. on the steps of the legislative buildings after arriving in the Inner Harbor escorted by recreated Ss. Commodore, being built by the RCN. Band concerts will be held in parks in the afternoon, and at night a band concert will likely be held in the Royal Theatre.

Monday: Parade in the morning. Victoria Motorcycle Club display, and a power boat regatta on either Thetis or Elk Lake, in the afternoon. Night displays will be given by Colwood Trail Riders' Club and the Vancouver Island Western Square Dance Club. Dancing will take place in Memorial Arena.

Exemption Ruled Out

Saanich council Monday night decided it could do nothing about providing a municipal tax exemption for residents at age 65, on the same lines as the provision in federal income tax.

E. W. Bavin, 3355 Richmond Road, wrote to council asking for the assessment to offset assessments on older properties which were recently increased by council under the Equalization of Assessments Act.

Some 426 of 1,149 residents of the district would be affected by such an exemption, Acting Reeve George Austin told councillors, but council was unable to take any action.
